Hi there,

Welcome to the latest edition of the Collabforge newsletter! In this edition we share some of Collabforge's daily collaboration practices, introduce a new team member, share insights from a recent project with Public Transport Victoria, and detail our team's explorations into the intersection of collaboration and gameplay.

Happy reading and collaborating!

CASE STUDY: PUBLIC TRANSPORT VICTORIA

Read about how Collabforge brought together a collaboration dream team and partnered with Public Transport Victoria for 'VicTripathon', an innovation prize challenge that inspired Victoria's digital innovators to deliver thirteen market-ready apps for public transport users in just a few weeks. ## GAMING FOR COLLABORATIVE STRATEGY-MAKING

Strategy Lead Hailey Cooperrider has been researching the intersection of collaborative strategy making (and in particular scenario modelling) and role-playing/storytelling games. Her thesis topic is "how might we use role playing games to make strategy making capability more broadly accessible". We interviewed Hailey to find out more about her research and what she's learned through application. Meanwhile, Collabforge Facilitator John Hibble recently attended a 1-day Gamestorming workshop with Dave Gray as part of the UX Australia 2015 conference and workshop series. Read more...

MEET THE TEAM: MICHAEL WHELDON

Michael is Collabforge's product designer / creative lead and has worked on many of our recent projects. We sat down with Michael and asked what collaborative projects he's been following as well as how he finds his creative inspiration. Read about Michael here!

A SHORT STORY ON COLLABFORGE'S OWN COLLABORATION PRACTICES

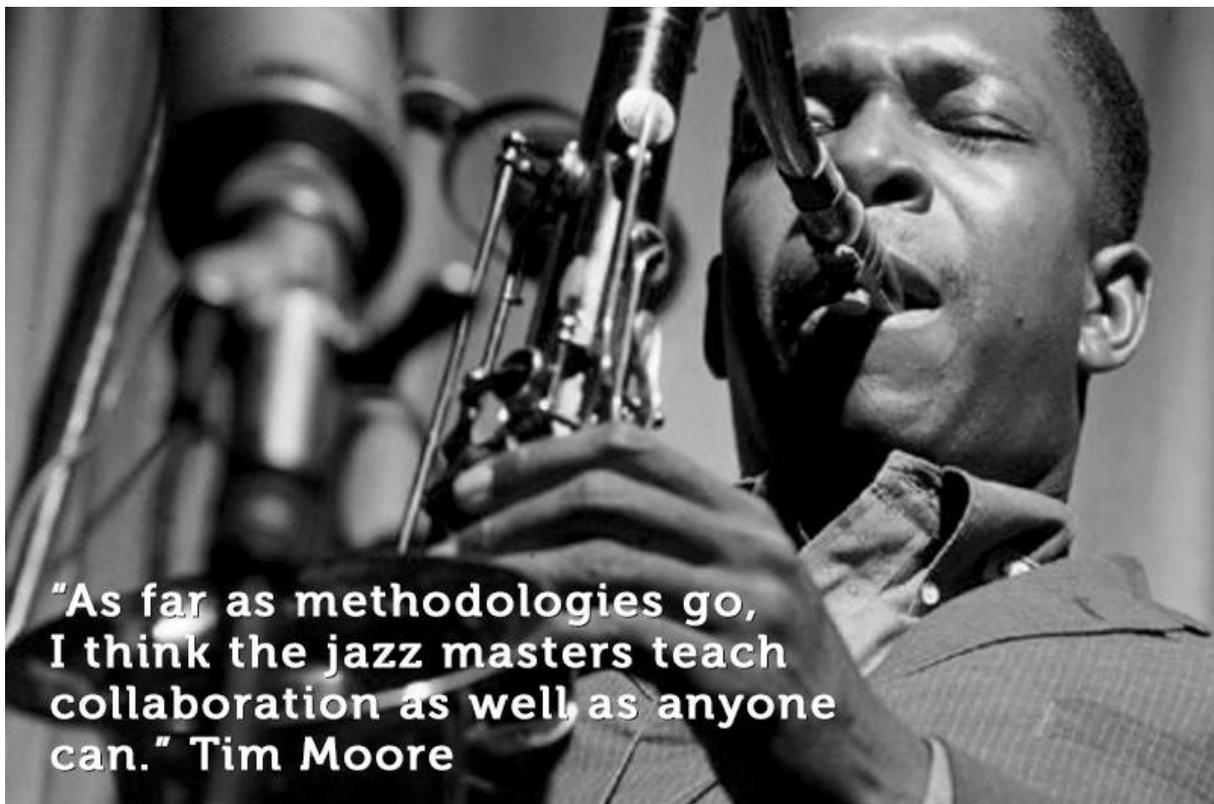

We profile an average Monday morning in the Collabforge office and how we apply our collaborative practices to every facet of our working lives. Read more...

DO YOU HAVE A GREAT STORY ON COLLABORATION OR INNOVATION YOU'D LIKE TO SHARE?
